ANZ's Asia Strategy

ANZ has an opportunity to build a high-growth core banking business to take advantage of the prospective growth rates in Asia. Ultimately our aim is to build Asia-Pacific as the third core geographic franchise in addition to consolidating our position in its domestic markets of Australia and New Zealand, and to advance our position as Australia's leading bank in Asia, building on our existing presence and long experience in the region.

Why Asia?

The developing countries in Asia are likely to have 2-3 times the economic growth of OECD countries and much higher than our domestic markets and even higher rates of growth in financial services. With Australia's increasing economic and political interdependence with Asia, this presents a natural expansion opportunity for a highly capable bank like ANZ.

Shareholders can invest in Asia and ANZ separately. What they cannot currently invest in is an Asian financial institution with ANZ inside. That, in addition to our traditional Institutional regional franchise, is what ANZ will offer investors.

While the return on risk is favourable, it is equally recognised that the risk of Asia is likely to be higher than Australia's, but this can partly be mitigated by focusing on lower risk businesses such as retail banking, by leveraging our knowledge of our clients, and through exporting genuine capability that may be lacking in these developing markets. Additionally, with the increase in intra-Asia trade and economic activity, Asia now has less reliance on the US.

Our Approach

Network businesses we will to grow our ANZ branded network business in Asia, which is already one of the largest in the region. We will continue supporting trade flows in the region, supporting our Australian and New Zealand clients doing business in Asia, and supporting our Asian clients doing business in Australia and New Zealand. This business grew 45% last year.

Partnership businesses we will invest in establishing retail and small business oriented partnerships with local banks with strong but under-leveraged franchises. We will provide support in their development with our well-recognised domestic and international banking expertise, to accelerate their growth and development. Key areas of management involvement are in retail banking, small business, credit cards and risk management.

Some countries are unrestricted in their foreign shareholdings and this would permit us to have legal and management control. In most cases however, there are shareholding restrictions, which limit our shareholding, say to an initial 20%. This varies by country. In addition, domestic-owned banks tend to have full freedom whereas foreign-owned banks tend to operate with local restrictions. By partnering with local owners ANZ can participate more fully in these markets.

Also, ANZ is targeting joint-ventures in specialist areas such as credit cards where we can hold a higher share in the joint-venture, than in the partner.

Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Limited ABN 11 005 357 522

ANZ's Asia Strategy

Going Forward

In terms of investing additional capital, our focus will be on the Partnerships business, where over the medium term we will look for further opportunities in existing countries with our partners, and in high population fast-growing developing countries. This could include further city investments in China, an increased investment in Indonesia, Vietnam or the Philippines, and new situations in countries such as Thailand. We are unlikely to invest in more developed markets such as Japan, Singapore, and Hong Kong, other than in Institutional.

As regulations relax we would also be willing to expand our shareholdings in our existing partnerships and work with them in local consolidation opportunities.

Over the medium-term, the higher growth rates in our Asia businesses could result in Asia being material to ANZ, and equivalent in the fullness of time to New Zealand in its contribution to ANZ.

ANZ 2006 Annual General Meeting

Chairman's Address
15 December 2006

Good Morning. My name is Charles Goode.

Welcome to the 2006 Annual General Meeting of ANZ. Let me also welcome shareholders joining us through our webcast on anz.com.

On behalf of the board let me also say how pleased we are to be again holding our Annual General Meeting in Sydney.

We believe it is important to provide shareholders in the major capitals of Australia with the opportunity to attend our annual general meeting.

Sydney and the state of New South Wales are important to ANZ, not just because NSW is the largest economy in Australia.

New South Wales is also important to ANZ because 171 years ago the Bathurst Bank opened for business. The Bathurst Bank was part of what was to become the Union Bank and eventually ANZ. So, as you can see, we are one of the longest operating businesses in NSW.

Today, New South Wales is important because we have almost 76,000 shareholders here. And we have around 3,600 staff working from 220 branches throughout the State doing the most critical job in ANZ that is serving our customers.

This year we opened nine new branches in New South Wales. In 2007, we will be opening a new branch almost every week in Australia.

This year in Australia we added three new staff members every working day. Most of those roles were what we call customer facing. That means they are focused on better serving our customers and growing our business.

As a Group, we have added 5,000 new staff over the last four years.

So when we say we are a very different bank, you can see, that in terms of our people and in terms of serving our customers, we mean what we say. Hopefully as we go through the morning you will see many more examples of how ANZ is different.

Now turning to today's meeting:

1

As a quorum is present I now formally declare this Annual General Meeting of shareholders open.

I propose to take the Notice of Meeting as read. If you need a copy of the Notice, please ask one of the attendants. Minutes of the last meeting and copies of the annual report are available in the registration area.

At our meeting today the Chief Executive John McFarlane and I will report on ANZ's performance and the priorities for the period ahead.

I will later open the floor for questions or comments on any matter related to our business.

After the questions we will move to discussion on the three items of business before us.

At the end of the Meeting the Directors and many of our senior management would like to meet you and talk about ANZ over a cup of tea or coffee in the foyer.

Now let me introduce your Directors.

On your far left is Jerry Ellis. Jerry lives in Melbourne. He is a member of the Risk Committee and the Audit Committee.

Jerry is seeking re-election at today's meeting in accordance with the Company's Constitution.

Then David Gonski. David lives in Sydney and is Chairman of the Governance Committee and a member of the Risk Committee.

Next is Margaret Jackson. Margaret lives in Melbourne and is Chairman of the People Committee and a member of the Audit Committee.

Margaret is also seeking re-election at today's meeting.

Next to me is John McFarlane, the Chief Executive Officer.

On my left, is Peter Marriott. Peter is the Chief Financial Officer. Peter has been with ANZ since 1993 and is recognised as one of Australia's leading chief financial officers.

Next is David Meiklejohn. David lives in Melbourne and he joined the Board in October 2004. David is Chairman of the Audit Committee and a member of the Governance Committee and the Risk Committee.

Next is Dr Greg Clark. Greg joined the ANZ Board in February 2004. He lives in Sydney and New York, and is Chairman of the Technology Committee and a member of the Governance Committee.

Finally, there is John Morschel who lives in Sydney. He joined the Board in October 2004. John is Chairman of the Risk Committee and a member of the People Committee.

2

You can read full details of the Directors' backgrounds and qualifications in our Annual Report.

Before we move on from directors I would like to pay tribute to Dr Roderick Deane who retired as a director this year after 12 years on the Board. Roderick Deane is regarded as one of the leading businessmen and community leaders in New Zealand.

During his time on the Board, Roderick made a significant contribution to our Bank due to his clarity of thinking and his experience in business, in the public sector and in banking. This contribution also extended to our New Zealand operations where he made a special contribution to the development of the business as Chairman of ANZ National Bank.

I know all of us thank him and wish him well.

Now let me introduce the ANZ executives on the stage. Behind me from your left are: Tim L. EStrange, Group General Counsel and Company Secretary, Shane Buggle, Group General Manager Finance, and then John Priestley, Company Secretary.

Turning to ANZ's performance during the year.

Our strong results for the year reflected our investments in new branches and other new points of distribution in Australia, New Zealand, and in Asia.

Net profit after tax, excluding significant items, was a record $3.6 billion.

I would like, on behalf of shareholders, to congratulate John McFarlane, our management team and all our staff for this excellent result.

For the thirteenth successive year the Board has increased dividends.

Importantly, dividends per share for the year increased by over 13 per cent to $1.25 fully franked. The Final Dividend of 69 cents a share was paid into the bank accounts of shareholders today.

Shareholder return is a combination of dividends and increases in the share price. ANZ total shareholder return in the 2006 financial year was 17.1%.

Our revenue growth of 8.4% was the highest for many years. Despite the increased costs from investing in our businesses our cost to income ratio fell by 1% to 45.6%.

Our Personal Division had an outstanding year. Revenue was up 13% and earnings up 22%. Investment and insurance products were up 48%, consumer finance up 25% and mortgages up 21%.

Profit from our Institutional Division grew 11%. While the environment at the top end of the institutional market remains challenging, a recent survey confirmed ANZ as the Number One Lead Institutional Bank in Australia.

3

In New Zealand, earnings were up 20%. There were good results from The National Bank retail, Corporate and Commercial and New Zealand Institutional. On a geographic basis, net profit after tax was $830 million. Overall our New Zealand businesses are showing promising momentum and they have a clear growth strategy.

In the Pacific our businesses recorded a 35% increase in earnings. I should make the point here that in very difficult circumstances over the last few months in East Timor, the Solomon Islands, Tonga and Fiji, our staff have carried on delivering critical banking services. While we remain very committed to the Pacific and based on our long history there, we feel positive about the future of the island economies, the reality is that the events of the past year do damage foreign investors' view of the whole region.

In Asia our business also performed well, with earnings up 18%. This reflected the success of our network business, growth in credit cards in Indonesia and the Philippines, and the first year of operations of ANZ Royal Bank in Cambodia.

The past 10 years and the future.

I would like to put this year's performance in the context of the past ten years and to mention some of the steps we are taking to continue to strengthen ANZ for the future. I will briefly cover how we are facing up to the major challenges confronting businesses in the 21st century.

Our aim is to manage ANZ with an eye on short-term performance but to build a business for the long-term.

And so we believe that shareholders should judge us not just on this year's financial success but on the foundations we continue to put in place to deliver sustainable returns over the longer term.

Ten years ago in 1996, the market capitalisation of ANZ was $10.6 billion. Today we are almost 5 times the size with our market capitalization now over $52 billion. Ten years ago our profit was $1.1 billion. This year it is $3.6 billion.

ANZ today is very different bank from what we were 10 years ago.

We are much better balanced in terms of our risk profile; better balanced in terms of our mix of businesses; better placed in our exposure to the growth economies of Asia Pacific and well positioned in terms of our ability to meet the challenges of the next ten years.

Just as importantly, we are serving the long-term interests of our shareholders in our attention to our customers, our staff and the communities we serve.

In addressing the major challenges and opportunities facing our business in the 21st Century, I'll comment on four, namely the rise of Asia; the environment; corporate and community responsibility; and the need to have a strong focus on customers and staff.

The first is the profound shifts in the centres of economic activity to Asia and the growth in consumer markets.

Throughout Asia we are seeing the largest move from the country to the city in the history of the world, especially in China.

Just over 20 years ago more than 76% of China's total population lived in the country with just 24% living in the city. Today 43% or 520 million people live in China's rapidly growing urban areas.

As in the rest of Asia, this move to the city and the development of urban consumer markets will accelerate, moving from 43 percent today, to an estimated 69 percent by 2015.

With the incomes of the new middle class rising dramatically, predictions see China surpassing the United States in purchasing power terms between 2012 and 2015. By 2025, China is expected to be the world's largest economic power by almost any measure. As China moves to a more consumption-led economy, Chinese incomes will grow and a massive middle class is expected to emerge.

People tend to save more during their prime working years, from 25 to 64, and in China 54% or 650 million people, are in that age group. Chinese already are big savers but the banking system at the moment is under-developed in its ability to mobilise those savings for investment. Electronic payment systems and more accessible credit will accelerate the growth of the Chinese economy and the growth of financial services.

There are two key planks to the way we are approaching Asia.

- The first is our network of ANZ branded businesses in Asia. This network undertakes trade finance, foreign exchange, limited institutional banking and some private banking. It has been developed over many years and is the largest of any Australian bank in the region.
- The second plank is our Partnership strategy. This strategy sees us invest in banks which have strong market shares in their home market and where we can actively work with them to add value. Having partnerships in six countries in Asia which are primarily focused on consumer and small business banking means we have less risk than the more conventional approach of offering a full range of services from a wholly owned bank, focusing on one country.

Let me give you some highlights of our investment in Asia over the last twelve months.

In September 2005, we launched the ANZ Royal Bank of Cambodia. Today it is the fastest growing bank in Cambodia with the second largest market share.

In Vietnam, we acquired a 10% interest in Sacombank and established a credit card joint venture.

In China, we acquired a 20% interest in Tianjin City Commercial Bank and a 19.9% shareholding in the Shanghai Rural Commercial Bank. We also opened an office in Gangzhou.

Last month we announced we are negotiating a 24.9% investment in Malaysia's fifth largest financial services organisation, AMMB.

Another major challenge to business is the environment. While this is a new area for banks it is clear that we have to integrate a care for the environment into how we operate as a business.

I am pleased to announce that today we signed up to the Equator Principles. The Equator Principles are a financial industry benchmark for assessing and managing social and environmental risk in project financing. Basically it means that we will not provide loans to large projects where the borrower will not or is unable to comply with certain social and environmental policies and procedures.

Last month ANZ and WWF-Australia launched a strategic three-year partnership. We are working together to develop a practical program to reduce our own environmental footprint; build awareness and understanding of sustainability issues among ANZ staff; have responsible lending in sensitive industries; and be active in financing environmental projects.

Next year work starts on our new building in Melbourne which will be home to 5,500 ANZ people by the end of 2009. This will be Australia's largest office building and will have a minimum five star environmental rating. Apart from being energy efficient, the building will have a rainwater collection system and make extensive use of fresh air and natural light.

Reflecting our progress on environmental and sustainability during the year, the Dow Jones Sustainability Index ranked ANZ among the top five banks globally for having sustainable management practices.

Another challenge facing business is the overall image of large companies in the community... Our approach is based on the basic belief that business does have responsibilities to the community and that by managing them well we benefit all our stakeholders including our staff, our customers and our shareholders.

At ANZ, I believe we are building an organisation which is embedding into its culture a real commitment to the community from the Board, from management and from staff at every level of the bank.

In addressing our community obligations we have sought to align our community programs with the business of the Bank. Our programs are not about simply writing a cheque but being actively involved in addressing issues facing the communities where we operate.

For example, the video you saw on your arrival outlined our involvement with the Aboriginal Employment Strategy in New South Wales. This program is running in ANZ branches in Moree, Wee Waa, Gunnedah, Tamworth, Muswellbrook and Cessnock. Its aim is to place young Indigenous high school students in part-time work as they complete their high school studies and give them a start in the workforce. We are also working with the Australian Government in Indigenous communities to improve money skills.

We believe improving financial literacy in our community is a core responsibility for ANZ and essential to the long term success of our business. In November 2006 we released a comprehensive study into issues causing financial difficulty. This year, we also provided an additional $3 million for financial literacy education and a matched savings program to help low income families establish long term savings habits. Earlier this year, we partnered with the Brotherhood of St Lawrence to offer small loans to people on low-incomes.

In New Zealand, we have also completed ground-breaking research on financial literacy and programs with the aim of helping New Zealanders better understand and manage their own finances.

We also worked with the New Zealand Cancer Society on their Daffodil Day fund raising and for the Plunket, an organisation that provides health and wellbeing services to children under 5. We helped raise more than $1.6 million for these groups.

In Fiji we are working with the United Nations Development Program on an innovative rural banking program to bring basic banking services to 400,000 people in remote rural communities.

Of course many of our communities are struggling with the effects of drought and other natural disasters. In Australia, this month we announced a million dollar program which will focus on drought relief. This program aims at not only giving grants to help rebuild and sustain rural communities but to provide financial support for affected farmers and farming communities.

We have also provided cash assistance to customers affected by Victorian bushfires last summer and earlier this week announced assistance for customers impacted by bush fires in Tasmania. We provided up to $1 million in assistance to customers impacted by Cyclone Larry and assistance for the Katherine floods and to Western Australian customers affected by storm damage.

As a result of the depth and breadth of our community involvement, this year we were pleased to receive the Prime Minister's award for excellence in community business partnership for impact on a community.

Now, turning to our customers and staff - we understand that ANZ only exists because of its customers. Over the coming years attracting and retaining talented staff to satisfy the needs of our customers wherever in the world those customers are will be increasingly difficult.

I wish to note here our commitment to keeping our call centres in Australia. We understand that our Australian customers prefer to deal with someone at a call centre in Australia and we have committed to maintain all our customer call centres here. Today we employ over 1,000 staff in our Australian call centre operations and this year, for the third year in a row, ANZ was named as having the best call centre in Australia.

In Australia alone we not only added over 700 staff this year; we had the most engaged staff of all major Australian companies; and the highest staff satisfaction of any major company. ANZ was named the leading organisation for the advancement of women in Australia.

Some of the reasons behind those levels of staff satisfaction include: the doubling of parental leave from six to twelve weeks; establishing a partnership to provide childcare centres; guaranteeing staff over 55 years the ability to work part time if they chose; and free health checks every 18 months for all staff.

It was pleasing to have our progress in this area recognised this week as part of the 2006 Australian Sustainability Awards where we received the Special Award for Labour Relations.

One issue that has received prominence in the last few months has been that of succession planning.

With our Chief Executive, John McFarlane approaching retirement the search for a successor as Chief Executive commenced around mid-year. Our focus is on appointing an executive who is empathetic to our strategy and capable of continuing ANZ's record of growth.

At the outset let me say the Board and I hold John in the highest regard. He has done an excellent job for ANZ, for shareholders and for employees.

However as we look to the future it is clear that we have to find a successor for John. That successor could come from within ANZ or it could be an external appointment.

In June, the Board established a Succession Committee comprising of Margaret Jackson, David Gonski and myself as Chairman. We have commenced a benchmarking and external search process led by executive search firm, Whitehead Mann who were appointed in September. This will include carefully reviewing a number of excellent internal candidates.

The date at which a suitable appointee will be available is not known. Recognising this, John has agreed to be flexible about the exact timing of his retirement from ANZ so that we can appoint the best possible person internally or externally as ANZ's next Chief Executive and have the time necessary to make a well-managed transition.

We recently formalized this flexibility by extending John's contract to 31 December 2007 and it may be extended further by mutual agreement if it assists in the succession process. This gives the Board the scope to focus on producing the best succession outcome for ANZ rather than being constrained by specific dates.

Turning to shareholders, over the past year, a number of shareholders have written to me to say that the current shareholder privilege pack lacks relevance to them. We are undertaking a review of this program.

We will let shareholders know the outcome of this review in due course. In the interim, shareholders should continue to use their 2006 privilege card to access the benefits under the program.

8

Outlook

We expect the environment for banking to be supportive in the year ahead.

Conditions in Australia should still be conducive to reasonable earnings growth although it is unlikely to exceed 2006 levels.

New Zealand's economy may well be softer over the next two years, but we remain confident of the long term future of our New Zealand business.

At ANZ during 2006, we saw significant momentum as a result of our investments in branches, ATMs and staff numbers. This will continue as will our expansion in Asia.

Provisions for loan losses in 2006 were low and benefited from the recovery of previously made loan provisions. We can not expect our loan loss provisions to continue at this low level.

The adoption of the Australian International Financial Reporting Standards, or AIFRS as they are called, will make a significant difference to the ability of all banks to give predictions because of the wider variations in provisioning. AIFRS was introduced to allow international harmonisation of financial reporting. AIFRS replaces the Australian Accounting standards.

Under the old accounting standards we used Economic Loss Provisioning. With Economic Loss Provisioning the charge to the Profit and Loss reflected the loss expected from the portfolio across the economic cycle and was therefore relatively insensitive to actual losses in any one year.

Under AIFRS, the charge to the profit and loss comprises two components:

- Individual provisions for losses on specifically identified impaired loans, and
- Collective provision being an allowance for loans that have not been specifically identified but events have occurred that are likely to have caused them to become impaired.

Therefore when there is a downturn in the future not only will our individual loan provisions rise but at the same time we will have to increase our Collective Provision. Under the new accounting standards there will be more volatility in the results we will be reporting to shareholders than has historically been the case. This will be so for the banking industry.

Overall the outlook for 2007 remains positive and while we expect it to be a good year for revenue, we do not expect the growth in profit after tax to be as strong as 2006 given the likelihood of significantly higher loan loss provisions.

That completes my formal address and I now invite our Chief Executive, John McFarlane to address us.

<John McFarlane speaks followed immediately by a short video presentation.>

Thank you John and I hope you enjoyed our video.

Business of the Meeting

We will now move to the first item of business in the Notice of Meeting – the consideration of the Concise Annual Report, Financial Report and the reports of the Directors and of the Auditors for the year ended 30 September 2006.

This year we again invited shareholders to send in questions ahead of the Meeting on issues that are important to them. We believe this is an important step in allowing a greater number of shareholders to be involved, particularly those who cannot attend the Annual General Meeting.

Naturally we will also take questions from the floor as we move through the formal part of the Meeting.

The questions received from shareholders prior to the Meeting covered a wide range of topics and I am now going to address the most frequently asked questions.

The first issue shareholders raised is the planned retirement of John McFarlane and succession planning.

I covered this issue in my speech, but as there have been a good number of shareholder questions on this issue I would like to just go over what I said earlier and take the opportunity to set the record straight as I know the publicity on this has caused many shareholders to be concerned.

First of all this is an issue about Chief Executive succession planning not an issue about John and myself or John and the board.

Let me be very clear, the Board and I hold John in the highest regard. He has done an excellent job for ANZ, for shareholders and for employees.

John and the board agreed some time ago that it would suit him to retire at the end of his contract and this has been confirmed in recent discussions subject to the retirement date not inhibiting a good succession process.

It has been clear to the board as we looked to the future that we have to find a successor for John. That successor could come from within ANZ or it could be an external appointment.

That succession process has been formally underway since around June this year.

At that time we established a board committee made up of Margaret Jackson, David Gonski and myself.

That committee developed a job description, set out the criteria we were looking for in a new chief executive and interviewed six executive search firms from which, in September, we appointed Whitehead Mann, a leading international search firm. The Succession Committee then briefed the successful firm in more detail.

John McFarlane briefed them in early November and they came to Australia in mid- November to meet directors individually and as well as several members of our senior management team. This was to allow them to better understand their client, ANZ, and its culture.

With their help we are looking at both external candidates and a number of excellent internal candidates. Our focus in this process is on appointing an executive who is empathetic to our strategy, capable of continuing ANZ's record of growth and who can help continue the strong working relationship between the board and the management which John helped establish.

Recognising how important it is to appoint the very best person, John has said he is flexible about the timing of his retirement and is willing to stay longer if needed.

As a result we formalised this by extending extended John's contract to the end of 2007 or later by mutual agreement if that assists the succession process.

The environment

A number of shareholders asked what ANZ was continuing to do to improve its environmental performance and to prepare for climate change. I addressed this issue in my speech and there is a great deal more information in our most recent Corporate Responsibility report which is available here today.

In 2004, we appointed Gavin Murray, who was formerly Director of Environment and Social Development at the International Finance Corporation, a member of the World Bank Group in Washington DC. Gavin is the executive who is leading the development of our lending policies and procedures so there is more consideration of environmental and social issues. He is also actively involved in establishing a dialogue on environmental issues with our customers and with environment groups.

Our aim has been to address those issues by increasing our engagement with clients, environmental groups and governments on the environmental impacts of their business activities.

We believe that by promoting constructive engagement between all parties positive commercial, environmental and social outcomes can occur.

Recently some environmental groups have raised concerns about ANZ's role as banker to companies involved in logging in Papua New Guinea.

We have had discussions with the major client in Papua New Guinea which has recently engaged in a series of voluntary initiatives including investigating international forestry certification; establishment of a tree nursery capable of producing 200,000 seedlings a year; undertaking reforestation on identified harvested areas; and agreeing to meet with non-government organisations to discuss their concerns.

While it is pleasing that we are making progress on environmental issues, I want to make it clear that we understand we cannot be complacent.

As part of the risk management framework, a Special Issues Committee has been formed to examine our involvement in environmental sensitive projects.

Gavin Murray and his team are also developing specific policies on forestry, energy, water and mining to guide our decision making and client engagement in high impact sectors.

We have also appointed Sean Silvey within our Shared Services group with the task of leading the reduction in ANZ's own environmental footprint including reductions in energy consumption, increased recycling and introducing environmental and social requirements for our suppliers.

The challenge we face is to take ANZ to a new level in terms of its environmental engagement and performance.

A number of shareholders have raised the issue of women and their representation on the Board and in senior management.

ANZ was the first of the major banks to appoint a woman to the Board. That was Dame Leonie Kramer in 1983. She was followed by Margaret Jackson.

We would like to have more women on the Board, but we won't appoint someone simply because of their gender, that would be seen for what it is; tokenism. We will however continue to look for suitably qualified women as part of our continual process of Board renewal.

In terms of senior management, with women representing 20% of our executive team, we are short of where we would like to be. However we are making progress.

- For the 5th consecutive year, we have been recognised as an Employer of Choice for Women.
- We now have 2,718 women in management positions up 86% over the past 5 years.
- 5 years ago, women represented just 15% of promotions at executive level. This year that percentage was 32.

We are also addressing the issues that either keep women out of the workforce or that restricts their careers. These include:

- extending paid maternity leave from 6 weeks to 12 weeks; now 87% of women who go on maternity leave return to ANZ.
- Carer's leave, allowing employees to take time off to look after family members. This year 7554 employees took carer's leave, with 69% of those being women.
- a partnership to establish child care centres across Australia.

We see diversity more broadly than just in terms of gender. Our employees come from at least 133 different countries and over 75 languages are spoken by ANZ people.

Our people are staying with us longer, with the average retirement age now around 59 years, up from around 55 in 2001. Some of you may have seen that this year we introduced guaranteed part time work to anyone over 55, to help retain these workers at ANZ.

We are making good progress on the representation of women in management and on diversity more generally but we know we need to continue to work hard to achieve our objectives in this area.

Some shareholders have written to us asking about offshoring and the item covering this at the end of the Notice of Meeting

This is a major issue on which I wish to explain our position.

The Finance Sector Union, which represents just under 30% of ANZ's staff in Australia, asked ANZ to provide to shareholders a statement on the issue of offshoring.

The statement from the Union was included with your Notice of Meeting, along with a response from ANZ on offshoring and what we are doing in this area. I encourage you to read this.

In our response, we highlighted that to survive in a highly competitive sector Australian companies like ANZ need to be able to compete against larger global competitors. Already, many of our international financial services competitors operating in Australia have offshore operations to support their Australian businesses. These include GE Money, Citibank, HSBC, and JP Morgan.

Bangalore in India has also developed as a global technology centre, with many of the world's largest companies including IBM and Microsoft, basing key parts of their technology and operations support functions there

This means that developing a capability offshore to take advantage of the highly talented workforces which exist in countries like India is essential for us to remain competitive and at the forefront of developments in technology.

As an international company, we therefore believe choosing locations overseas for some functions is appropriate. I wish to point out that at the same time our staff numbers in Australia are growing.

ANZ has owned a technology business called ANZ Operations and Technology in Bangalore, India since 1989. So the idea of offshoring is not new to ANZ.

Over the past 17 years, this business has established a specialist capacity in developing and managing software and technology for many of ANZ's systems. In recent years, the business has also developed a capability to support some of ANZ's operations functions. We currently employ about 1,600 people in Bangalore in technology and operations functions.

Our capability in Bangalore helps us to remain competitive and helps us continue to invest in growing our customer service business in Australia. For example, we have employed 700 more staff and opened 25 branches in Australia in the past year.

At the same time we understand the concern and uncertainty the discussion of offshoring causes amongst many Australians. For that reason we have made several undertakings about the way we will approach using our facility in Bangalore.

Our Call centres will remain in Australia.

The central location of records for our Australian customers is our data centres in Australia. Customer data is securely held there and these data centres will remain located in Australia. The data is subject to Australian privacy laws and ANZ's information security standards. We strictly observe our obligation to hold customer records securely - it is a fundamental part of our role as a bank.

When information is accessed overseas as a result of a customer-initiated transaction or as part of ANZ's operations, it is subject to the same strict information security standards and policies that apply to information located in Australia. These security standards and policies apply to ANZ's operations globally, to ensure that we fulfil our obligations in Australia, New Zealand and all of the other countries we operate in around the world.

It is worth noting that in its 17 years of operation, ANZ's Bangalore offices have never had an information security concern.

We are focused on creating opportunities our people at ANZ. Where we do transfer roles from Australia to Bangalore, our focus is on redeployment and internal mobility. For example, many of the 300 IT staff affected by last year's decision to move IT roles to Bangalore have found other roles within ANZ.

We need to be competitive and efficient to create jobs in Australia. Over the past four years we have added about 3,000 staff in Australia and in the 2006 alone we have employed almost 700 additional Australian staff. We are investing in new branches, expanding our ATM network, and increasing the number of people in our branches.

We believe we are pursuing opportunities offshore in a responsible way with policies in place to protect the interests of customers and to ensure we minimize the impact on our staff by focusing on redeployment and job creation here in Australia.

Let me again thank those many shareholders who took the time to write to us with their questions.

<Questions from the floor and business of the meeting.>

May I take this opportunity to wish all shareholders a very happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year. I now declare the Meeting closed.

Annual General Meeting 2006

Chief Executive Officer

ANZ s journey to a very different bank

Appendix 3Y Share Transactions by Mr John McFarlane

The attached Appendix 3Y includes transactions in ANZ shares and options undertaken post the AGM on 19 December and 20 December 2006, together with the shares acquired on 15 December under ANZ's dividend reinvestment plan, by Mr John McFarlane, Chief Executive Officer of ANZ.

The purpose was essentially to free Mr McFarlane's UK pension plan of its stock holdings as a prelude to seeking Australian citizenship and the potential transfer of his pension plan from the UK to Australia, without reducing his overall holdings in ANZ shares.

The transactions were:

- The on-market sale of 279,445 shares on 19 December 2006 at an average price of $28.2476 per share from Mr McFarlane's UK Self Invested Pension Plan.
- The acquisition of 300,000 shares due to exercise of options on 20 December 2006 at $16.69 per share granted on 31 December 2002 pursuant to approval at ANZ's 2001 Annual General Meeting.
- The acquisition of 1,221 shares on 15 December 2006 at $28.25 per share pursuant to ANZ's Dividend Reinvestment Plan.

As a result of these transactions, Mr. McFarlane's total direct and indirect holdings of ANZ shares have increased by 21,776 to 1,997,713, and his holding of ANZ options has decreased to 700,000 options.
