Item 8.01 Other Events.

On November 2, 2005, Competitive Technologies, Inc. (“CTT”) announced that the U.S. Supreme Court has granted the writ of certiorari and agreed to hear the appeal of Laboratory Corporation of America Holdings d/b/a LabCorp (“LabCorp”) in a homocysteine patent case. The petition for appeal had been filed by LabCorp in its attempt to overcome an infringement ruling in a patent case in which CTT's patent rights, and those of its clients, had been upheld by both the U.S. District Court and the Court of Appeals of the Federal Circuit. Recently, the U.S. Solicitor General, at the request of the U.S. Supreme Court, had investigated a single issue of patentability presented in the petition for appeal and recommended that the U.S. Supreme Court deny the writ of certiorari and not hear the appeal. Nevertheless, the Court has decided to hear the case on the single issue of patentability.

A copy of the press release is attached as Exhibit 99.1.
