Announcing Ryanair's new routes in London today, Michael Cawley, Deputy CEO said:

"In 2004 Michael O'Leary said: "Who wants to go to Gdansk? There ain't a lot there after you've seen the shipyard wall". There he goes - wrong again. A big piece of humble pie later and it's RE (Ryanair in Europe) Day as Ryanair liberates Poland from the tyranny of high fares. British Tourists can now discover Poland and decide for themselves what Gdansk, Bydgoszcz, Szczecin, and Rzeszow have to offer without paying the high fares of LOT and Easyjet.

"Today, we also add a new route to Bratislava in Slovakia, which has the added appeal of its proximity to Vienna, a destination which until today could only be accessed at prohibitively high fares.

"These five new routes mean British passengers will save over GBP60M on the high fares of other airlines and will benefit from Ryanair's unbeatable punctuality and customer service".
