HEADLINES

DI signed a definitive agreement yesterday to be acquired by Intuit. The transaction was announced publicly a couple of hours ago.

Intuit will pay DI shareholders $39 per share in cash and acquire 100% of the stock in the company.

We expect the transaction will close sometime in Q1 of next year.

Following the close, we will operate as a division of Intuit, with responsibility for leading the company's new Financial Institutions Business Division.

We do not expect that any jobs will be eliminated or that any reporting relationships will change.

We will retain the Digital Insight name.

We will convert to Intuit's comp and benefits programs which is, in almost all cases, better than DI's.

Everyone who has worked on this transaction believes strongly and collectively that this is a clear win for everyone: employees, clients, partners, and shareholders.

I'll spend the rest of my time with you explaining why we reached that conclusion, outlining our communications plan and timetable, and then taking questions.

WHY WE MADE THIS DECISION

Selling the company was a choice, not a necessity.

DI has performed extremely well since the Company was founded 11 years ago, continues to perform well today, and would have continued to perform well in the future, operating as an independent company.

Because it has performed so well, DI had lots of choices about how to position ourselves so that we could best serve our clients, continue to grow the business, and continue to provide opportunities for our employees to grow and develop.

The Board and SMT evaluated all of the options available and concluded that (a) we needed to be larger so that we could have greater access to investment capital and (b) we needed some additional competencies to be able to fully deliver on our mission of helping our clients compete and win.

As a result, we decided to explore the option of selling the company.

Intuit is, by far, the best option.

Intuit and DI have complementary capabilities that, in combination, will position us to lead the development of the next generation of online financial services, just as we pioneered the development of the first generation. Here are some examples:

DI has a world-class delivery system and distribution channel; Intuit has world-class content.

DI has deep knowledge of and great relationships with financial institutions; Intuit has a remarkably strong franchise with consumer and business end users. Intuit, TurboTax, Quicken, and QuickBooks are among the world's most widely recognized and respected brands.

DI has the ability to build and manage big, complex operating systems; Intuit is renowned for developing and delivering simple, easy-to-use solutions.

Intuit is relying on the team that's in place at DI to lead the development of a new Financial Institutions Division within Intuit—one of the company's 3 major lines of business, along with small business and tax.

This is an extremely important growth initiative for Intuit.

They know that DI people have the skills, knowledge, and experience to build this business and that Intuit people do not.

Our business models and systems are complementary, rather than overlapping so there are few, if any, job redundancies.

As a consequence, we are planning no job eliminations and no changes in reporting relationships. I will continue to lead DI as FI Division President, reporting to Steve Bennett, Intuit's CEO. The rest of the SMT will continue with Intuit in their current or comparable positions

DI and Intuit have already worked together successfully as partners. We know we can create extraordinary new growth opportunities together. As important, we know our values are compatible and that we can work comfortably together.

Joining forces with Intuit doesn't compromise in any way our ability to work closely with key business partners, particularly core processors. In fact, we believe the combination will enhance those relationships, because we'll be able to deliver to our partners new products and services that we would otherwise not have.

Finally and importantly, Intuit has a well-deserved reputation as being a great place to work.

Intuit has ranked among Fortune Magazine's Top100 Companies to Work For for the past 5 years.

Intuit has a very well-thought out and executed career development program for all employees

Intuit's compensation and benefit programs are in most all aspects equal to and, in some cases, better than DI's. For example, Intuit's 401(k) program provides matching at a much higher level than DI's program and Intuit's tuition reimbursement program is more generous.

DI's current stock option, restricted stock, and ESPP plans will be handled as follows:

All vested restricted stock will be cashed out at closing at $39 a share.

All remaining unvested restricted stock will be converted into a right to receive cash over your original vesting schedule at a share price of $39.

All outstanding stock options will be assumed and replaced by Intuit with options to purchase Intuit's common stock pursuant to a conversion ratio which retains the same economic value and vesting schedule.

Any dollars contributed to the ESPP will be used to purchase DI shares at the purchase price applicable to your current purchase period through a special pre-close purchase and the purchased DI shares will be cashed out at $39 a share at time of close.
