Item 1.01 Entry into a Material Definitive Agreement.

On December 13, 2011, Southwest Airlines Co. ( Southwest ) entered into an aircraft purchase agreement (the MAX Agreement ) with The Boeing Company ( Boeing ) to purchase 150 Boeing Model 737-8 ( 737 MAX ) aircraft, with deliveries scheduled to begin in 2017. The MAX Agreement also includes options to purchase an additional 150 737 MAX aircraft. Based on current list prices, the total value of the agreement is approximately $14 billion (the List Price ); however, the MAX Agreement contains certain confidential credits, discounts, and concessions that reduce Southwest s aggregate purchase price to an amount lower than the List Price.

On December 13, 2011, Southwest also entered into Supplemental Agreement No. 75 (the NextGen Supplement ) to its Purchase Agreement No. 1810 with Boeing relating to Southwest s purchase of Boeing Model 737-7H4 ( -700 ) and 737-8H4 ( -800 ) aircraft (collectively, 737 NextGen Aircraft ). Pursuant to the NextGen Supplement, (i) Southwest has elected to make firm purchase commitments for an additional 58 737 NextGen Aircraft through either the exercise of existing options or new firm commitments; (ii) Southwest has elected to exercise its right to substitute 45 -800 aircraft in place of -700 aircraft orders; (iii) Southwest and Boeing have agreed to convert 78 purchase right 737 NextGen Aircraft (aircraft with respect to which Southwest s right to purchase would have been subject to the availability of the applicable aircraft during the purchase right window ) to 78 options to purchase 737 NextGen Aircraft; (iv) Southwest s remaining 20 purchase right aircraft have been cancelled; and (v) Southwest and Boeing have agreed to transfer 53 firm purchase commitments for 737 NextGen Aircraft held by AirTran Airways, Inc. to Southwest. The NextGen Supplement also includes certain confidential credits, discounts, and other concessions provided to Southwest by Boeing.

As a result of the MAX Agreement and the NextGen Supplement, Southwest has the following contractual commitments
