AstraZeneca Submits an sNDA for SYMBICORT® for the Treatment of Asthma in Children as Young as Age Six

AstraZeneca today announced that it submitted a supplemental New Drug Application (sNDA) to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for approval of a new indication for SYMBICORT® (budesonide/formoterol fumarate dihydrate) Inhalation Aerosol for the long-term maintenance treatment of asthma in paediatric patients ages 6 to 11 years old. SYMBICORT is currently approved for the long-term maintenance treatment of asthma in patients 12 years and older.

“Millions of children in the U.S. are affected by asthma,” said lead investigator Jeffrey Leflein, MD, Allergy & Immunology Associates of Ann Arbor, Michigan. “SYMBICORT could potentially offer another treatment option for the long-term maintenance of asthma in young children whose condition is not adequately controlled with inhaled corticosteroids alone.”

The submission package is based on a robust clinical development program consisting of five active or placebo-controlled Phase III trials assessing the efficacy and safety of SYMBICORT pressurized metered-dose inhaler (pMDI) that included 1,446 children ages 6 to 11 years old with asthma. The proposed starting dose for children (80/9 mcg twice-daily) was studied in one pivotal randomized, double-blind, active-controlled, 12-week study that evaluated 256 children ages 6 to 11 years old with mild-to-moderate persistent asthma previously treated with inhaled corticosteroid therapy. In this study, SYMBICORT was compared to budesonide pMDI and formoterol dry powder inhaler. A second study evaluating this dose included 351 subjects ages 6 to 11 years old. Results from both studies demonstrated that SYMBICORT 80/9 mcg twice daily had a similar safety profile to one of the mono-components, budesonide; likewise, results from the first study also found that SYMBICORT 80/9 mcg twice daily had a similar safety profile to its other mono-component, formoterol. The most common adverse events reported were headache, pyrexia, upper respiratory tract infection, nasopharyngitis, and pharyngolaryngeal pain.

About Paediatric Asthma

Asthma is a chronic disease of the lungs that affects children, as well as adults, and it can be life threatening if not properly managed. Nearly 9 million children in the U.S have been diagnosed with asthma at some point in their lives. Asthma is a cause of school absenteeism, accounting for nearly 13 million missed days of school in 2003. It is also the second leading respiratory disease to cause hospitalization in children under the age of 15. According to the National Institutes of Health Guidelines, combination therapy is recommended for children with severe persistent asthma or in those not adequately controlled with medium doses of inhaled corticosteroids alone. The annual direct healthcare cost of the disease for children and adults in the U.S. is approximately $14.7 billion. Indirect costs (e.g., lost productivity due to missed days at school or work) add another $5 billion, for a total cost of $19.7 billion.

About SYMBICORT

SYMBICORT is a combination therapy indicated for the long-term maintenance treatment of asthma in patients 12 years of age and older. Administered twice daily, SYMBICORT is a combination of two proven asthma medications – budesonide, an inhaled corticosteroid (ICS), and formoterol, a rapid and long-acting beta2-agonist (LABA). SYMBICORT does not replace fast-acting inhalers and should not be used to treat acute symptoms of asthma.
