Employee Communication

We appreciate that you will have some questions regarding the announcement of TD Bank's agreement to acquire Commerce Bancorp, Inc., including the impact on your Commerce shares and stock options. We have prepared this Q&A to help answer some of your questions regarding the following:

Commerce shares

Commerce stock options

SmartBuy Program

401(k)/Employee Stock Ownership Plan (ESOP)

Q1: I own Commerce shares – what is the impact to me?

A: The proposed transaction is expected to be completed in the spring of 2008, subject to receiving both regulatory and Commerce shareholder approvals. If consummated, the date on which the transaction will occur is called the Closing Date. On the Closing Date, each of your Commerce shares, whether in a personal account, your 401(k) (including the ESOP account) or in the SmartBuy Program, will be exchanged for 0.4142 shares of TD Bank and $10.50 in cash.

Example:

You own 100 Commerce shares

On the Closing Date, you will receive:

$1,050 (100 x $10.50) plus

41 TD Bank shares (100 x 0.4142, rounded down), plus

A cash amount equal to the fractional TD Bank shares eliminated by rounding (0.42 in this case) multiplied by an average of the market price of TD Bank shares over the five trading days prior to the Closing Date.

Q2: I own Commerce Shares. Will there be any tax consequences to me?

A: If the total value you receive on the Closing Date (the cash and TD Bank shares described in Question 1 above) is greater than your tax basis (cost) of those Commerce shares, this excess amount will be taxable for federal income tax purposes.

Q3: I hold Commerce stock options – what is the impact to me?

A: On the Closing Date, all of your unvested Commerce stock options will become fully vested and will be converted automatically into stock options to purchase TD Bank shares. You will not receive any cash on this conversion (however, your stock options may be exercised for cash as described in Question 7 below).

Q4: How does the conversion of stock options work?

A: Stock options will be converted using a stock option exchange ratio (as described in Question 5 below) that was calculated in a way that is intended to preserve the face value of your stock options without triggering current taxation. Face value means the value determined by multiplying the number of Commerce shares subject to your stock option by the exercise price. The face value of your new TD Bank stock options will be roughly equal to the face value of your Commerce stock options. The numbers will vary slightly due to rounding, as illustrated in Question 5 below.

Q5: What is the stock option exchange ratio?

A: The stock option exchange ratio is 0.5522. To convert your Commerce stock option into a TD Bank stock option, the number of Commerce shares subject to your Commerce stock option will be multiplied by 0.5522, and your exercise price will be divided by 0.5522.

Example. Assume that on the date preceding the Closing, you have a Commerce stock option to buy 100 shares at $30. The conversion of your stock option will be as follows:

Options	Exercise Price	Face Value	Shares Issued	Calculation
100	$30	$3,000	Commerce	- 100 options x $30 exercise price = $3,000 face value

Following the Closing Date:

55	$54.33	$2,988.15	TD Bank	- 100 options x 0.5522 (rounded down to the nearest whole number) = 55 - $30 exercise price ÷ 0.5522 (rounded up to the nearest whole cent) = $54.33 - 55 x $54.33 exercise price = $2,988.15 face value
----	---------	------------	---------	---

Please note that this example is for illustration purposes only.

Q6: I hold stock options. Will there be any tax consequences to me?

A: There should be no tax consequences to you as a result of the accelerated vesting of your stock options, or the conversion of your options into TD Bank stock options.

It is intended that any Commerce stock option that has been designated as an incentive stock option (ISO) will continue to be treated as an ISO after conversion (and retain the favorable tax treatment), provided that you continue to satisfy the applicable holding periods and other requirements. However, because the Internal Revenue Code limits the value of stock options subject to ISOs that can vest in any calendar year to $100,000, the accelerated vesting of your Commerce stock options could result in certain ISOs being treated as non-qualified stock options (which are not eligible for the favorable ISO tax treatment).

Q7: Can I exercise my stock options?

A: You may continue to exercise your stock options as described below.

Exercise Prior to the Closing Date: There are no changes to the terms or processes in place today for exercising your stock options. If you exercise your stock options and hold Commerce shares on the Closing Date, those Commerce shares will be purchased by TD Bank for a combination of cash and TD Bank shares as described in Question 1 above.

Exercise After the Closing Date: Your new TD Bank stock options will continue to be covered by the same terms and conditions of the applicable Commerce stock option plan. The only changes will be:

different number of options (see Question 5 above);

different exercise price (see Question 5 above);

the option will be to purchase TD Bank shares instead of Commerce shares; and the process instructions may change.

Q8: What is the impact on the SmartBuy Stock Purchase Plan?

A: The SmartBuy plan will be terminated just before the Closing Date. Until the SmartBuy plan is terminated, the plan will continue to operate as it has always operated. You may continue to make contributions to the plan, change your payroll deduction amount and withdraw or sell your shares at any time. On the Closing Date, Commerce shares in your account will be exchanged by TD Bank for cash and TD Bank shares (see Question 1 above). There will be no new purchases of Commerce shares or reinvestment of dividends after Closing Date.

Q9: What is the impact of the proposed transaction on shares held in my 401(k) plan?

A: Commerce shares held in your 401(k) plan account, whether as part of the shares held by the plan in the ESOP feature or as part of your other investment options into which you have invested contributions, will be treated in the same manner as all other Commerce shares, as described in Question 1 above.

Q10: I own Commerce shares in my 401(k) plan. Are there any tax consequences to me?

A: This transaction should not by itself be a taxable event to you as a 401(k) participant with respect to your Commerce shares held in the plan. The 401(k) plan is designed to meet the requirements of Section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code. Generally, taxes will only be due upon the receipt of a distribution from the 401(k) plan which you do not choose to rollover, or which is not eligible to be rolled over, to an eligible retirement plan.

Q11: Are TD Bank shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE)?

A: Yes TD Bank is listed on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol TD .

We hope this answers some of your questions regarding your Commerce shares and stock options. We would encourage you consult with your own tax advisors with regard to the impact of the proposed transaction on your specific circumstances. If you have any other questions, please contact your manager, HR representative, or the mailbox on CommerceTeamWOW!
