Speaker: Jeff Bewkes, Chairman & CEO of Time Warner Inc.:

Hi everyone, I want to share exciting news with you about the next chapter for Time Warner: the agreement we've entered into to be acquired by AT&T. As you all know, over the past several years we've focused our company on the growing demand for high-quality video all over the world. And as we've done this, we've built a track record of creative and financial success that is second to none in our industry -- and it's something that each of you can be very proud of.

With AT&T, we're bringing together all our great television, film, games and digital content and we're aligning it with their direct-to-consumer distribution across TV—including DirecTV--mobile and broadband in the United States. and across Latin America. All told, AT&T has more than 100 million subscribers. This combination is going to put us in an even stronger position to go where our audiences are going: to a world with ubiquitous video-on-demand across all platforms and devices, giving people great experiences along with the brands and the content they love.

That's been one of our most important strategic priorities and we're already making great progress - both in partnership with our distributors, and on our own by directly connecting with consumers. Joining forces with AT&T gets us—and them – there faster and better than either of us could do on our own. It creates enormous new growth opportunities—for example, by allowing HBO and Turner to bring new innovative services to the market sooner, and at greater scale, and by making Warner's unmatched library of films, television shows, and games the anchor tenant in new digital and mobile services.

We're a strong fit with AT&T in other ways also. This is a marriage of two companies with long legacies of innovation that continue today, and we have a shared vision of how our companies can grow together.

So what does this transaction mean for employees? Randall Stephenson, AT&T's Chairman and CEO, and his team, recognize that the value of our brands and businesses depends upon the expertise of our people, and they are very committed to retaining the talented people who have made us the best in the industry. Importantly, the driving force for this transaction is not cost savings –it's growth opportunities.

Under the terms of the agreement, AT&T has agreed to pay $107.50 a share for each Time Warner share, half in cash and half in stock. And once the transaction closes, our shareholders will have a stake in the world's leading, integrated media and communications company, with a strong financial profile and unparalleled record of success.

The transaction is subject to regulatory approvals, which are expected to take about a year to conclude. I plan to stay on as CEO of Time Warner's businesses, which will become a subsidiary of AT&T, to ensure a smooth transition as we join forces.

Now, I know many of you will have a lot of questions about what this means for Time Warner employees, and we've set up a special section on MyTW that we will update with the latest information. As we begin this new chapter, I want to say thank you, once again. Your dedication and creativity have allowed us to achieve the great success that we've had -- and we will continue to build on -- as part of AT&T. So, let's keep up this fantastic momentum, and I'll be in touch with you as we get further updates.

Thanks.
